Remember the book 1984 by George Orwell? When it was published, THAT was the future! How about Year 2000, the New Millennium, when THAT was the future. We’ve lived through all of those futures, so what’s the next “future”? One thing we know for sure is that the pace of technological change has accelerated. Let’s first take a quick look back, just to set the stage, and then look ahead—not too far, maybe 8 to 10 years. For instance, consider how you did things prior to the Smart Phone, then imagine what’s likely to happen by, say, 2030, driven by technology. We’ll look ahead at autos, airplanes, railroads, space travel, highways, healthcare, education, climate and environment, energy generation, and more. Will this lead us to the “Future Perfect”?
